

HOPE REVIVED FOR LOCATING LOST AIRPLANES

Four Flares Are Sighted By Mate and Lookout of The "West Sequana"

CONTINUE THE SEARCH

Believe Erwin Was Forced Down About 600 Miles Off California Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—Four reddish flares, reported sighted by the mate and lookout of the freighter West Sequana, came early today as the most hopeful omen in the four-day search for the lost Dole planes, Golden Eagle and the Miss Doran.

A third plane, the Dallas Spirit, which left Oakland late yesterday to search for the Hearst plane and the "flying school-marm" ship, is also feared to be lost in the Pacific.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—The Federal Telegraph Company received the following at midnight from the steamer West Sequana:

"In latitude 37.32 north, longitude 127.22 west, at 72 midnight, Pacific standard time, saw flare. Standing by until daylight. Flare not repeated."

At 8 p. m. last night the West Sequana was 798 miles west of San Francisco, bound for Shanghai.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—Naval radio headquarters announced at 2.20 a. m. today that their operators had established contact with the destroyers that went to "B" position last given by "Spirit of Dallas." This plane with Pilot Bill Erwin and Navigator Alvin Elchwald, is believed to have dropped into the sea when flying from Oakland to Honolulu in search of the missing Dole planes, "Golden Eagle" and "Miss Doran."

The three destroyers, Lavallette, Sumner and Hazelwood, had nothing to report at that time, navy operators said, but promised to flash any discoveries as soon as they were made.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—The Navy continued its search today for the five missing aviators who failed to reach Honolulu in the Dole race. At the same time, naval ships were ordered to keep a sharp lookout for Capt. Billy Erwin and his navigator, A. H. Eichwald, who are believed to have been forced down 600 miles off the coast of California when searching for the lost Dole fliers.

Since Erwin's last radio message gave his position minutely, the site of his mishap should be reached without difficulty. Erwin's plane the "Dallas Spirit" was equipped with an emergency rubber life boat, but if the "tail spin" described in a final message, resulted in the crashing of the plane, it is unlikely that the aviators would have had time to launch the boat.

If the plane crashed, as the last dramatic message suggested, it may have sunk without leaving a trace of the tragic disaster. In the meantime, awards have mounted to $40,000 for the saving of the five lost aerial adventurers. Crafts of all sizes were patrolling the waters for signs of either planes or survivors. There were said to be about fifty ships engaged in the search, the largest number ever to be enlisted in a similar project.

Two Suits Have Been Started For Damages

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 20.—Two suits were started in the Court of Common Pleas in which damages aggregating $3500 are asked as a result of personal injuries and damage to property sustained when an automobile collided with a horse and carriage in Hilltown township two years ago last Monday.

The plaintiffs, represented by Grim & Grim, Perkaskie, are Caroline Wietecha and her husband, Thomas Wietecha, Hilltown township. The defendant in the suit is W. J. Neeley and his wife, Mrs. W. J. Neeley, 614 Bambrey street, Philadelphia.

The collision, it is alleged, took place on a road between Sellersville and the Wietecha home in Hilltown township, when Mrs. Wietecha was riding as a guest in her husband's carriage. The woman was thrown from the carriage when it was struck, it is alleged, by an automobile driven by W. J. Neeley and owned by his wife. Mrs. Wietecha is asking $3000 damages and her husband $500. Suit was started by Grim & Grim, Perkaskie.

UNDERNOURISHED CHILDREN, TO NUMBER OF 4,000. HAVE ENJOYED LIFE AT CAMP HAPPY THIS YEAR

City of Philadelphia Has Tots As Its Guests—Strict Attention Paid to Rest, Food and Sleep—Everything Provided for a Royal Time

The lives of 4,000 undernourished youngsters are being made brighter and better this summer through outings enjoyed at Camp Happy, which is located at Torresdale.

The camp is operated by the Department of Public Welfare of the City of Philadelphia and the only requirement necessary for a child to be a guest of the city is that he or she be undernourished.

The third encampment is now at the Torresdale grounds, the number this week being 1,353. This number includes both white and colored children, and they are having the time of their young lives. Each child remains for a period of three weeks, and during that interval enjoys the many games which the camp affords, partakes of well-cooked food and secures plenty of sleep.

When the tots enter the camp an examination is made to see that they are free from contagious diseases. Their camp life begins in earnest when they put aside their street clothing and receive a camp suit, blanket, towel, wash-rag and night-gown. To each is assigned a cot in one of the 60 log cabins which dot the 40 acres of ground. The only work required of them during the course of a day is that they make up their own cot. They are the guests of the city of Philadelphia and royally are they entertained.

To them is extended the privilege of enjoying the outdoor swimming pool, which pastime is supervised. They are permitted to use the many see-saws, carousel, volley ball and basketball courts, may-pole, small sand pits and the baseball diamond.

Everything is done for their comfort and in each of the buildings on the premises there is hot and cold running water.

There are some of the structures that deserve particular mention. One is the large log cabin which is used as an auditorium. This is built of logs taken from the woods on the plot when the camp-site work was first commenced. The stone used in the base of the cabin and in the fireplace in Hill Bathing Beach. This spacious room accommodates 1,500 children, and here many a pleasant evening is spent. Plays are frequently presented upon the platform, and during this summer the Stanley orchestra, as well as the firemen's and police orchestras from Philadelphia, have amused the children.

The director of the camp is Oscar E. Gerney, with Herbert S. Herzog, as assistant director. Mrs. Herzog has charge of the office, and Miss Martha Swain is camp dietitian. There are 48 counselors besides the staff, which comprises 12. The counselors are either student or graduate teachers, most of whom have received training at Temple University or the Philadelphia Normal School.

"We are pleased with the gain made by the children this year," said Mr. Herzog, in speaking of the advance made in the children's health. "The gain per child thus far this year is 2.6 pounds."

Charles H. Grakelow, who became greatly interested in the enterprise, has donated many books for the children's library at the camp, and these the boys and girls enjoy in their periods of quiet.

The mess hall seats 1,200 children, and the hospital is the essence of neatness and cleanliness. In the latter building there are seven cots, lining

JURY EXONERATES MAN IN CYCLIST'S DEATH

Manslaughter Charge Was Lodged Against Akers In George Magyar's Death

"UNAVOIDABLE DEATH"

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 20.—Six Morrisville men forming a coroner's jury yesterday afternoon exonerated Samuel L. Akers, of Lambertville, of manslaughter in connection with the death Tuesday afternoon of George Magyar, 17 years old, of Penn Valley. An automobile driven by Akers struck the boy and caused instant death, as he was riding on a bicycle on the Bristol Pike.

The jury after but a few minutes' deliberation returned a verdict of accidental and unavoidable death. The trial was held in the morgue of J. Allen Hooper, at Morrisville. The panelmen were James Howell, foreman; Andrew Thompson, George Rose, James Cahill, Bernard Gear and Frank Hibbs.

The jury was selected by Coroner W. Furman Young, of Bristol, who viewed the body of the boy at Hooper's Morgue.

Burial was conducted yesterday morning following high requiem mass at the Holy Trinity Church, Morrisville, at 9.30 a. m.

—Mrs. James McGee and children, of Washington street, are spending some time at Atlantic City, N. J.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—Despondency over ill health was blamed today for the suicide of Charles E. Bumbaugh, 52, father of 10 children, who blew the top of his head off at his home at Pondbank, near here.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—County authorities started an investigation today into a frustrated attempt of several prisoners here to make a dash for their liberty after attacking Thomas Kelly, 53, keeper of the county jail.

MANY GAS WELLS ARE BROUGHT IN PENNA.

Prominent Gas Men Say That Prospects for More Wells Are Good

MANY DRILLINGS TAKES POCKETBOOK

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—Much interest has been aroused in Western Pennsylvania by the number of gas wells brought in during the past few weeks. Prominent gas men say the prospects are that many more successful wells soon will be drilled. Three wells producing thousands of cubic feet of gas daily have been reported from Mercer, Indiana, Jefferson and Washington Counties.

A possible paying gas test well was brought in on the County Commission, F. P. Minner's, farm, near Mercer, when a large flow was encountered in the 100-foot Murphysville sand.

The Elderton Coal Co., has just drilled in their third well on the James Crawford farm near Indiana, producing 1,000,000 cubic feet daily. The first well, it was reported, still gives a fair production, and the second well has a flow of 600,000 cubic feet daily.

In Jefferson County, at Harmony, the Kurtz interests struck paying sand with a flow of 250,000 cubic feet daily.

A Connellsville Company recently brought in the largest flowing gas well in the history of Washington County with an estimated flow of more than twelve million cubic feet.

MERCER, Pa., Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—Harry Herbert, 16, will have the distinction of being one of the few persons to live with a broken neck, if he survives from his paralytic condition. Young Herbert broke his neck and was paralyzed when he dove into too shallow water in the Shenango River. Physicians said the youth is gaining strength daily.

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—There is one automobile for every four persons in Butler County, according to the county automobile association's recent survey. There are 15,000 cars registered with the association. The list, however, was said not to be complete.

GREENVILLE, Pa., Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—Though 80 years of age, Jerry Welk, of this city, is one of the few Democrats who has filed a petition as a candidate for jury commissioner in this county. Welk hopes to succeed himself.

Strong Attraction For Trenton Baseball Team

Judy Gans' All-Stars, one of the fastest colored teams in the baseball game today, will be the attraction at Trenton, tomorrow. Earlier in the season they were defeated by the capital city team 1-0 score.

Manager Lloyd was particularly fortunate in securing this strong aggregation of ball players, and weather permitting there should be a big crowd of fans on hand to witness the game.

Assurance has been given by Manager Gans that Big "Bill" Hackett will be on the firing line for the visitors and undoubtedly Blake will do the pitching for the home team.

LEBANON, Pa., Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—Thomas Donnachie, for many years golf professional at the Chambersburg Country Club, and prior to that an assistant at the Hagerstown, Md., Country Club, has been selected as professional at the Lebanon Country Club.

Donnachie, a Scot, succeeds Joseph Parr, who died last month.

CONTEST AWARDS FOR QUAKERTOWN FIREMEN AGAIN

Appeal Is Made by Insurance Company From Board's Ruling

AGAINST QUAKERTOWN

Argue Men Were Not Going To A Fire; Thrown Into Common Pleas Court

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 20.—Appeals have been taken in the Court of Common Pleas in the cases of Justina Sames against the borough of Perkaskie, and Rose M. Crouthamel against the borough of Perkaskie, by the American Casualty Company and the borough through their solicitor, Hiram H. Keller, of Doylestown.

In a recent decision handed down by the Workmen's Compensation Board of the Department of Labor and Industry of Pennsylvania, Mrs. Sames was awarded compensation in the sum of $4704, while Mrs. Crouthamel was awarded compensation in the sum of $3004. The board decided that the borough of Perkaskie must pay.

The appeal is now taken by the borough and its agent, the American Casualty Company from the decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board. It is contended by those taking the appeal that in the first place the Workmen's Compensation Board was in error in reversing a finding of facts of the referee in the case, and second, that the two men, Jacob C. Crouthamel and Justina Sames, volunteer Perkaskie firemen, killed in an accident near Quakertown on April 1, 1927, died while riding on a fire engine were not going to a fire at the time.

Compensation was awarded on Aug. 5th to the two widows by the compensation board. An odd point of law was involved in the ruling, the board setting aside two decisions by referees. The test alarm, in responding to which Sames and Crouthamel received the injuries which resulted in their deaths, was sent in from Quakertown. Under an agreement volunteer firemen from a number of boroughs responded. The Perkaskie apparatus, on which Sames and Crouthamel were riding, sideswiped a telegraph pole.

The referees disallowed claims against the borough of Perkaskie, contending the two firemen in reality were employees of the borough of Quakertown at the time they met their death. Claims then were filed against the borough of Quakertown and were allowed, but an appeal was taken from the awards. It was contended in the appeals that the two men were not going to a fire when killed.

The latest step in the case is the filing of appeals by the borough of Perkaskie and the American Casualty Company against the Workmen's Compensation Board.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 20, 1927

THE SAVINGS MOUNT

The privilege of patting themselves on the back is accorded the people of Bristol and of Bucks County, as the news is received that the United States shattered its peace time savings and investment record during the first half of 1927.

The savings have been mounting for some time, and each small section of the country has had its share in the effort and result.

It is not hard to see that Bristolians have been doing their bit. The banks of the towns announce progress along the lines of savings funds, showing that the majority of the people are looking to the future.

Another way in which Bristol is piling up its dollars and ultimately its hundreds is through payments upon shares in building and loan companies. There are at present six such companies in the town, each not merely holding its own, but making rapid strides.

Some of these monies will be invested in homes, circulating among Bristol builders and masons, redounding to the good of all.

A share is held in the figures given out from the nation's headquarters by our own town. A portion of the new issues in securities is allotted to Bucks County; it has done much toward raising the figures for land and building purpose securities, which total over two billion in the United States.

The report states "The supply of funds seeking long term investment has been ample," and this section of the country has its slice in this, for the thrifty individuals here are numerous who have always looked to the future, and have no immediate need for the surplus cash.

Bucks, of which Bristol is the largest town, always holds its own as far as construction, savings, and the like are concerned.

I AM HAPPINESS

I am that for which you are looking. I am the goal of religion. I am the objective of philosophy and science. I am the dream of the wretched. I am the quest of the world, the great hunger of humanity.

My dominion over men is worldwide. As children they romp toward me. As old men and women they totter after me. I am an insatiable thirst.

Because of me mankind carries on business and commerce. Because of me the scientist labors long in his laboratory. Because of me untold millions of dollars are spent for the purpose of education. For men know that knowledge, health and business are paths to my domain.

My name is written in the most exalted declaration of independence on earth. The right to the pursuit of me has been written in the hearts of men and sealed with their blood. Civilization is my reward, and man's home is my chief dwelling place.

For all that I am a bright dream and a beautiful purpose, the children of men still stumble and fall and bruise themselves in my quest. They still confuse me with pleasure and with riches and with power.

Yet I am as I always have been. I am the same yesterday, today and forever. The children know me and possess me, and the childlike at heart never lost their hold on me.

Without art sense he can become a bachelor of arts, but he has to be artful to remain a bachelor.

Nearly every man has been provided with plenty of facilities for minding his own business.

SYNOPSIS

Emmett Murtough, a youth of Kiltanmaul, a village in Ireland, goes to America and is followed by Old Tom Kildare and his daughter Sheila, with whom Emmett is in love. Murtough is a careless, boastful lad and Sheila doubts if she should marry him. Sheila makes friends with the O'Sheas, who live in the same tenement as the Kildares. Rory O'Shea, the son, who lives with them, is a prizefighter, but a clean living youth.

But beyond those who hung about Healy's bar he had not even found a willing listener. And these men listened only when he had dollars with which to buy drinks. There were not many; drinks at sixty cents apiece rated high compared to Mrs. O'Farrell's inn in Kiltanmaul, and the taste was not the same to Old Tom's palate.

He found in Emmett the only companion of his impractical heart. The boastings and discontent of the younger man appeased his own vague desire. On Saturday nights after supper the two would sit in the parlor and with a pint of "the crathure" recall the minutest details of life in Kiltanmaul, and, as if to keep up the sagging courage of each other, scoff disdainfully at the meagre opportunities for great men which the old country afforded.

Sheila worried. Their capital, about five hundred dollars when they landed in New York, was rapidly diminishing. The rent and the groceries and the gas and electric bills were her troubles, for Old Tom absolved himself from any responsibility in the household affairs. Yet he did not hesitate to beg and to get a dollar or two frequently when he felt the need of the companionship of the hangers-on.

"Father, ye must get a job," declared Sheila one night, "for soon we'll have no money an' then how shall we pay the rent an' buy food? The prices are terrible here. Praties are sold by the pound, d'ye mind, now, by the pound, an' flour an' meal by the pound, too, an' a bit of pork enough for us an' Emmett costs almost as much as a half a ham in Kiltanmaul."

"But I don't know what I could do an' where could I find a job for me talents, Sheila, darling?"

"Ye talents, is it? Why, father, ye'r but a bit over forty an' 'tis a strong man ye've always been; Lord knows, there was no reason for ye to be otherwise considering the little ye did on the farm at home! There's plenty of work, why, they do be digging a new subway up there aways, near the Park, an' surely ye could find something to do there. I'd be ashamed, a strong man like you, to be sitting around the house all the day!"

"An' when did ye begin to have fine manners with yer father, to be telling him what he should do and what he shouldn't be doing?" the old man demanded angrily.

"Tis no good it'll be doing ye to fly in a rage, now," tartly replied Sheila. "Tis a job ye must be getting an' soon or it's in the poorhouse we'll be."

"But here's Emmett with a fine job an' a fine future. He's making good money. Why don't ye get married to him? There's room enough for us all here."

"I'll not be marrying Emmett Murtough just to be keeping a roof over our heads, mind ye that. I do not know if I love him at all anymore, or even if I ever did love him, the braggart! Oh, can't ye see, father, that Emmett's not turned out to be the man of his promise an' not that I ever would, but you see we cannot depend upon him an' his promises now? Why, there's Mr. O'Shea downstairs who started carrying the hod an' he worked steadily, he did, Mrs. O'Shea told me, until he was sixty years. An' now they got comfort an' plenty. Ye could do as well, father, if only ye would try."

"Ye been too much with the O'Sheas, I'm thinking," grumbled Old Tom.

"She's been good to me, an' they come from beyond Knockbotherum way, an' she's the only friend I have in all this great city."

"Well, Sheila, I will consider it, an' if I can find a place suitable to me talents, I'll take it."

Sheila turned away in despair. She felt that Old Tom would do nothing; Old Tom! The village had named him so, she realized now, not because of his years but because he was an idler, a good for nothing! And there was so little left of their pitiful resources which was to have seen them safely into comfort and plenty. Sheila slipped into a shawl and went downstairs to Mrs. O'Shea.

"Ah, 'tis welcome ye are, darling," the smiling old lady cried as she opened the door. "Come right in now, an' the kettle's on an' we'll have a cup of tea. Michael, Michael," she called to an inner room, "here's pretty Sheila Kildare come to see us! Come out now an' make yer bow to the prettiest colleen in New York."

The night was a bit chill and Mike O'Shea had been warming his stockings feet before the lighted oven of the gas range. He came into the room dragging his newspaper and with his spectacles dropped low on the tip of his nose. He was in his shirt-sleeves, and the collarless neckband was open, showing the red flannel shirt that he put on with the coming of every fall.

"Sure, an' 'tis glad we are to have ye," he smiled warmly as he gave her a hand calloused and gnarled from handling a million bricks in his day. "But come into the kitchen, mother," he went on, "'tis warmer there, an' sure there's no Irish girl that doesn't love her kitchen."

Soon the tea was ready, and after praising the tea and the homemade cookies Sheila came directly to her purpose.

"Mrs. O'Shea, ye've been kind to me an' I need the advice of you an' Mr. O'Shea. 'Tis about father. He's dear an' he's been a good father to me, an' I guess he isn't altogether to blame because he hasn't done much with his life. Ye know how it is back home there where the wife is all too willing to do the chores an' to look after things. So father didn't do so much at home an' 'tis hard for him to realize that he must get something to do here."

"An' what can he do?" Michael O'Shea asked.

"That's just it. He hasn't a trade, but he's strong; he's just a little over forty an' he's a good man yet with many years to come God be willing."

"An' 'tis a job he wants?"

"Tis a job I'm bound he's to get!"

"Now, wouldn't our Tim have something for him to do what with his contracting an' all?" suggested the sympathetic Mrs. O'Shea.

"He might," admitted Michael, "an' I'll speak to him come this Sunday. Maybe ye could bring yer father down, then Tim can look him over. It'll be hard work a-digging foundations, but if he's not too soft it'll be a job an' it'll pay enough to keep the wolf from the door, as the saying is."

"Oh, I'm so thankful!" exclaimed Sheila. "Ye see, father got some schooling when he was a boy an' he learned to read an' could read the Dublin papers, an', how he loved to talk! There was no mockery in Sheila's words, for she knew the O'Sheas would know the kind of man. "An' he would tell all the men of the village at Mrs. O'Farrell's inn, come evenings, the latest news in politics, an' would tell them, too, how he would be running the government, if he had his way. Even the Squire always said that Tom Kildare had one of the smoothest tongues in the Kiltanmaul countryside. An' father liked it an' mother spoiled him, God bless her, an' when it came turn to care for him an' the farm, I spoiled him, too, God help me! But I'm sure if he's given a chance he'll do his best. An' he must," Sheila added more soberly, "for we need badly the money that he could earn."

"There, there, an' don't ye worry, child," sympathized the older woman, "sure an' there's plenty to do here in this city if a man has a mind to do it, isn't there, Michael?"

"Sure there is, an' Tim'll give him a start at it. Just you bring yer father down here come Sunday."

This warm assurance of assistance relieved Sheila, and soon the three were talking of Ireland, and the laughter of Sheila rang through the little apartment as she recounted the incidents in her life at Kiltanmaul. It was after ten when they heard the front door of the apartment open and shut and a healthy voice crying greeting from the parlor.

EDDINGTON

Speaking of the town of Eddington in a recent news article L. Creighton Vandegriff, resident of the community to the south of Bristol says: "Few of us realize what a fine old place this town of ours really is; the important part it played in history; the internationally-known figures who have resided here; and the old landmarks which are pointed out with pride by people all over the country."

There are numerous spots of historic interest in Eddington, which was known to early inhabitants as Jug Town. For a number of years the village was referred to as such, but the citizens desired a more dignified name. After a long period of time past the name of Oak Grove was decided upon, as at that time the plot of ground upon which Christ Church stands today, was known as Oak Grove.

Until the application was filed for location of a post office in the town the place was known as such. When the residents applied for the office they were informed an Oak Grove already existed in Pennsylvania, and it would be necessary to find another name.

During the course of a meeting relative to the change in name, Eddington was hit upon, the town being named after the Eddington Farm, then located on Bristol Pike. The owner of the farmland, Mr. Gibbs had named his place after his birthplace in England.

SULLIVAN'S FIELD

GAME STARTS 3 O'CLOCK

Ann's grounds. This is the first of a three-game series. Avella, "Saints" shortstop, will not be able to play, and his position will be filled in by "Eddie" Roe. Tulio will draw the pitching assignment for the Sagolla clan, while Stallone will be his battery mate. Jones or Fine will pitch for Leyden's team, while Dietrick will catch. A large crowd is expected.

Tullytown

Rev. and Mrs. Francis J. S. Morrow, of the M. E. parsonage, entertained over the week-end their relatives, Mr. William Voss, and children, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Pomplon and daughter Margaret, of Baltimore, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. Rechtwalt and children, of Philadelphia, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matias Tischer, of Lovett avenue.
